

Food Resources: What are my Options?

Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP – formerly known as “Food Stamps”)

- The amount of benefits provided by SNAP depends on household income, size, and allowable expenses.
- SNAP does not cover the costs of all food but helps purchase food needed for a nutritional diet.
- You must meet income guidelines to qualify for the program.
- To apply, use the DSS Online System and hit “continue” to get to the SNAP application
- Or, apply at your local Social Services Office. Find your local office here.

WIC (Women, Infants, & Children)

- WIC promotes the wellbeing and health of low-income women, infants, and children.
- The program provides education for creating positive eating habits and making healthy choices.
- The program provides food vouchers that can be used at grocery stores throughout the state.
- To receive aid from WIC, you must have an infant, child younger than five, or be a woman or teenage girl that is pregnant, up to six months after pregnancy, or is breastfeeding up to twelve months after birth.
- You must meet income guidelines to qualify for the program or be a recipient of SNAP, Medicaid, TANF, or FDPIR.
- To register, use the following link to find a clinic near you: sdwic.org /locations or call (605) 773-3361 or 1-800-738-2301

Food Pantries

- Food pantries are generally non-profit organizations that distribute food to those that struggle to buy enough food to avoid hunger.
- There is often a limit on how often people can visit.
- Recipients may need ID and piece of mail to provide proof of mailing address.

Soup Kitchens

- Soup kitchens serve free, nutritious meals for people who lack resources needed to buy or prepare food.
- Locations and times may vary by community.
- Participants rarely need to establish eligibility for the service.

Community Meals

- Community meals are free meals that are served at special community events or informal gatherings. These occur sporadically/infrequently.

Sack Lunch/Backpack Programs

- Sack lunch programs provide a bag of food for people to take home when they don't have a meal.
- Backpack programs provide children with easy-to-prepare food to take home on the weekend when school is not in session.

Summer Feeding Programs

- Summer Food Service Programs (SFSP) provide meals at designated locations throughout the summer.
