

December Volunteer of the Month Celebrated

L to R: Ryanne Davis, Service Center Administrator at Brookings County Salvation Army; Jill Lindsay-Johnson, Volunteer of the Month; Keith Corbett, City of Brookings Mayor

The Helpline Center congratulates Jill Lindsay-Johnson on being named the December 2019 Volunteer of the Month, an area-wide award program sponsored by the Helpline Center.

Jill is the chairperson for the Brookings Salvation Army Share the Warmth event/committee. Jill also participates in committee meetings and volunteers her time, but goes above and beyond. During the Share the Warmth preparation and even following the event, Jill puts in hours that would be considered a full-time job. Jill selflessly serves the Brookings community while also raising two children. Jill is selfless, kind, and hardworking. The Salvation Army is lucky to have her!

Jill has been volunteering for the Brookings Salvation Army for many years. Jill serves the Salvation Army, in some capacity, on a daily basis. When asked why she enjoys volunteering for Brookings Salvation Army, Jill said she enjoys seeing how we help our community right in front of our eyes. Jill's favorite part about volunteering with the Salvation Army is the Share the Warmth event. Jill enjoys being able to provide assistance to individuals and families directly, and feels it is rewarding to take some stress off of families when they are in times of struggle and need. The Salvation Army appreciates all of the hard work and time that Jill gives and thanks her for selflessly serving the community of Brookings.

Congratulations, Jill, on being our much-deserved December Volunteer of the Month!
